ABSTRACT

A method of planning, a computer program, and a computer product for realizing supply-demand planning in a supply chain make a computer execute fetching switching information corresponding to a base and an item from a table, which contains the switching information corresponding to the base and the item, and performing, depending upon the switching information, either of supply-demand planning per order and supply-demand planning based on total amount of orders.